J.W. HOUGHTON, M. H. HOUGHTON,

The murder of Cook by Falkner at Avon, is another instance of a mis-spent life, ending in a shocking and ignoble death. Cook was a graduate at Oxford, was the son of wealthy parents, had many influential friends and all the opportunities of cultivated natural gifts and worldly endowments for making a useful and good man. Instead of which he indulged in scrapes, was a perpetual grief to his relatives and a disgrace to his family name, and preferred low companions and the life of a drunken brawler and fisherman, and instead of living respectably where he belonged, lodged m a hovel, slept three in a bed with other drunkards whom he had infini-

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

(From our own Correspondent.)

May 23d, 1879.

I came across, the other day, a copy of the new edition of Webster's Unabridged, the new edition of Webster's Unabridged, in more senses than one of the greatest of American books, and I confess I was surprised to see the changes and additions which it embodies.

We are accustomed to think of a dictionary per seas one of the most stable and fixed of publications, and indeed we are correct enough, so far as most works of the kind are concerned; but the publishers of Webster's seem to look upon its nature and mission in quite a different light. I venture to assert that for twenty years there has been no single secular volume before the country of greater value than the unabridged. Still its owners are not satisfied. They have have gone on republishing, revising and enlarging it until now it becomes a fair presumption to believe that they intend it ultimately to become a whole encyclopresumption to believe that they intend it ultimately to become a whole encyclopedic library in one volume. This last edition reaches 2,000 pages and contains full 3,000 engravings. It retains all the comprehensively treated features which valued it to its average recition. sised it to its present position, with the ddition, since the last previous issue, of addition, since the last previous issue, of almost five thousand new words and meanings and a new biographical dictionary of nearly ten thousand names. This latter is one of the most useful and sensible addends to the great works that could have been devised. In our readcould have been devised. In our reading we are constantly asking ourselves "who was this person and what, when and where was he?" Here we have the whole thing in a nutshell. A few words only are devoted to each subject, but they are words carefully chosen and give just the general information we require. The next Webster is "Unapproached" as well as "Unabridged."

Hints to Factory Men and Cheese Makers.

So much depends upon the quality, appearance and condition of cheese, when offered to buyers in the New York market, that we give some practical sugrestions, which, if carefully followed, not fail to save money to factory

"Aim to make cheese of finest quality in every particular—most buyers demand fine goods. Full cream, well cured, close made, clean favored, uniform in color, and perfect condition, together with good keeping qualities, is the kind sought for generally. If you have a few poor, imperfect cheese, do not smuggle them in with the sound ones, but send them separately, so as not to injure the sale of the perfect goods. Boxes should fit the chaese nicely; double rimmed are best for deep cheese. Always have boxes cut down same height as caecse, as in warm weather great damage and loss result from such neglect. Either factory brand or shipping brand should be put seatly on covers. The net weight of each cheese should be plainly marked on side of the box—not on covers. Every cheese should have a white-wood scaleboard on both top and bottom.

Give good weight, that will hold out when tested by the New York sworn weighmaster. When shipping at R. R. station, have cheese loaded in the cars, covers down. During the warm weather, ahip in ventilated cars when possible, otherwise have car doors fastened open a few inches, as many cheese are nearly runed by heat, in transit. The opening paper on "The Fine Arts at the Paris Exposition" has been demeled to disfiguration when he was merry or mad with drink.

The excuse of Falkner that he was frenzied with drink and knew nothing of the killing of his comrade, is the old excuse. A person has no right to drink to madness, and since he never knows the went over Nisgara the other day, knew mention others, these four pictures have len asleep; the tall grass waves over because he was reckless or stupid with drink. Whisky is too much for any man. None are strong enough to defy the power of alcohol.

Falkner was a comrade in the army with some of our soldiers of the 103d. It

But these two men had "sowed by Mr. Fox with much incidental light to the wind" in the indulgence of on the inventor's methods of work. The application to ocean cables to increase the speed and thus to reduce the cost of the speed and thus to reduce the cost of transmission, and the application to detect feeble pulsations of the heart, are here treated for the first time. Scientists show us that they can trace a period when the North Sea did not exict, and, at the same time, that England and the southern part of Scandinavia were joined to the continent of Europe. This was long before American enterprise unearthed Carboline, the Wonderful Hair Restorer, Nature's remedy, made from petroleum, thoroughly deodorized and delightfully perfumed. It will perform all that is claimed for it. Absolutely restores Hair on Bald Heads; cleanses the scalp from dandruff and all impurities; invigorates weak and sickly hair; tones the hair bulbs into a natural and healthy action. It is so penetrating that it reaches the seat of disease, the hair bulbs, and the benefit is almost instantaneous. It is cooling and cleanly, and too much praise can not be bestowed upon it. The Satyrs were part of the retinue of King Bacchus. They were supposed to be bald, with short sprouting horns, like those of kids, and goat-footed. They were of a lively, frolicsome disposition, but not very wise, else they would have cured their baldness by using Carboline, the perfection of the chemist's art, prepared from natural crude petroleum, thoroughly deodorized, and nicely perfumed. Every man, woman and child should use it as a dressing. It gives that peculiarly zoft and silky texture so desirable. It will not soil the finest of linen. Is cooling and cleanly, and can not be praised too highly. Sold by all dealers in drugs and medicines.

The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in gen eral are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memis no stock to compare with it, either in ory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone some-thing which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exer-cise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to try it. In fact, he distrusts every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where few of them existed, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged. The vocabulary of the ancient sages of Egypt was about 685 words. A well-educated person seldom uses more than 3,000 or 4,000 in actual conversation. Accurate thinkers and close reasoners employ a larger stock, and eloquent speakers may rise to a command of 10,000. Shakspeare produced all his plays with about 15,000. Milton's works are built up with 8,000, yet, with all these, there is not enough to accurately describe the superiority and general excellence of the world-renowned Carboline, which is an elegant dressing, removes dandruff, cleans the scalp, prevents the hair from falling out, restores the hair on bald heads, restores it to its original color, makes it grow rapidly, will not stain the akin, contains not a particle of lead, silver, sulphur, or other deleterious drugs. It is a natural product of the earth, containing the elements required by the hair to feed upon. A few applications will show its restorative qualities. Does not require months of continued use before you can perceive any result. It is cooling, cleanly, and too much praise cannot be bestowed upon it. Sold by all dealers in drugs and medicines. Price One Dollar a bottle. We advise our readers to give it a trial, feeling satisfied that one application will convince them of its wonderful effects. NUMBER OF WORDS IN USE.

TRUTH AT THE BOTTOM OF A WELL Truth comes to us as gold is washed down the mountains of the Sierra Nevadas, in minute but precious particles, and is still truth, though it be found at the bottom of an oil well, like Carboline—the great natural hair restorer, which effectually prevents the falling out of the hair, the accumulations of dandruff, and the premature change in color due to a diseased condition of the scalp and the glands which nourish of the scalp and the glands which nourish the hair. It is well known that the most beautiful colors are made from petroleum, beautiful colors are made from petroleum, and by some mysterions operation of nature the use of this article gradually imparts a beautiful light brown color to the hair, which, by continued use, deepens to a black. The color remains permanent for an indefinite length of time, and the change is so gradual that the most intimate friends can scarcely detect its progress. In a word, it is the most wonderful discovery of the age, and well calculated to make the prematurely bald and gray rejoice. Carboline is put up in a neat and attractive manner, and sold by all dealers in trugs and medicines.

A dressing which is at able, healthy, and effectual for preserving the hair. Faded or gray hair is soon restored to its original color, with the gloss and freshness of youth. Thin hair is thickened, falling hair checked, and baldness often, though not always, cured by its use. Nothing can re-store the hair where the follicles are destroyed, or the glands atrophied and decayed. But such as remain can be saved for usefulness by this application. Instead of fouling the hair with a pasty sediment, it will keep it clean and vigorous. Its occasional use will prevent the hair from turning gray or falling off, and consequently prevent baldness. Free from those deleterious substances which make some preparations dangerous and injurious to the hair, the Vigor can only benefit but not harm it. If wanted merely
